

This is Trevor. He is from Newhope, PA. He is a freshman majoring in Marketing. He currently has no job, and laughed when I asked if he did. Trevor's best memory of UTampa so far is making new friends from different states. He likes to meet lots of different people because he is social. Trevor described himself as funny, nice, social, and athletic. Saying that he is on the club soccer team and has made many friends from there. Some of his teammates are even from different countries.

During our interview, Trevor kept laughing and talking to his friend, whom Emma was interviewing. There was a sorority event going on the soccer field, which was to the right of us, and a Volleyball game happening behind us. With all of this happening, I think it was hard for Trevor to focus on what I was asking him. Since it was dark out and around 8:20 pm, Trevor and his friend had just come back from getting Ice cream and were planning on going to their dorm to watch a movie. While we talked, Trevor kept going on his phone as well. I truly think that Trevor wished he had said no to me when I asked him for photos. But he answered all of my questions anyway and was polite about the whole process.

Reflection:

I didn't really enjoy this assignment, as I find it can be awkward and uncomfortable for both students and the strangers on campus. I understand that we are all adults and should be able to approach strangers and ask them questions, but taking their photos and asking them personal questions, such as their job, hometown, and careers, could be a bit too personal to ask when it comes to a class assignment. I talked to a couple of my classmates, and they felt the same. Maybe for future assignments, maybe don't include some of the more personal questions. I also found it hard to find people to say yes to this assignment because of the time of night it is. I think this assignment would be better during the day, when the sun is still up and the campus is busier.
